

INTERESTED IN SCHOOL PSYCHOLOGY?

Attend the NASP 2023 Convention for FREE!

ABOUT

Are you interested in psychology? Do you want to support children's learning, behavior and mental health at school?

Consider becoming a School Psychologist!

School psychologists apply expertise in mental health, behavior, and learning, to help children and youth succeed socially, academically, behaviorally and emotionally. They partner with families, teachers, school administrators and others, to create healthy learning environments that strengthen connections between school, home, and the community.

NASP 2023

The APA Division 16 (School Psychology) Committee for Ethnic Minority Affairs and the National Association of School Psychologists (NASP) are partnering to invite undergraduate students from racially and/or ethnically marginalized groups to attend the NASP convention. If you are a student from an underrepresented group interested in school psychology, please apply to join us at the NASP convention this year! The day of the convention, mentors will be available to assist, answer questions, and provide information.
